"Books are education. The more people read, the more they know. The more good literature there is in their libraries, the more well-stocked brains there will eventually be, and good brains never will and never can be a drug on the market."

If the crowns of all the kingdoms of the Empire were laid down at my feet in exchange for my books and my love of reading, I would spurn them all.

INTRODUCTION.

In publishing and distributing a list of books for school libraries, it is the desire of this Commission to help the schools of the state to get the greatest possible return for the money they spend on school libraries—not the largest number of volumes, but the largest number of good, well bound and printed, and carefully selected books.

Discriminating care in the selection of books for a school library is so imperative if the books are to accomplish what a school library ought to accomplish, that the secretary of this Commission has cheerfully devoted much time to comparing the best lists of the kind in print, and to studying the books themselves. It is not enough that a book should be a good book—it must be good for something, or it is a waste of money to put it in a school library. In many of the school libraries of Nebraska there are cheap, unattractive editions of books of recognized standing—the English and other classics. These are well enough, in their way, but they are a poor beginning for a school library if not reinforced by the child's best literature. The primary function of a school library is to provide supplementary material for school use. Another, and equally important function is to enable children to form the reading habit, and to introduce them to the best in literature. That school that contents itself with teaching the mere mechanical art of reading, leaving the pupils to grope blindly through the literary wilderness for a lifetime, falls far short of the requirements of the twentieth century. If children are taught to use books, and given some means of obtaining good and useful books, much that it now seems imperative for the school to attempt may safely be left to the voluntary self-education of the people.

Any graded list of books for schools must be based on the assumption that children have been reading from the first grade on up. It is a great mistake to select the school library chiefly for the high school and upper grammar grades. In the use of books and the appreciation of literature, it is as true as of any other form of mental development that

> "we build the ladder by which we rise
> From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
> And we mount to its summit round by round."

If anybody must be neglected in the selection of books for the school library, let it be the older children. Children who have not had opportunity to read in the grades are not ready for the literature course in the high school.

The following list is planned to include the best supplementary literature, and some of the best literature of enjoyment. The standard authors in English and American literature have been somewhat sparingly included because it is assumed that the schools already have them or have planned to get them. For school editions of the literary classics, address the American Book Co., Educational Publishing Co., D. C., Heath & Co., Rand McNally & Co., at their Chicago houses, and Houghton, Mifflin & Co., at Boston.

Books should be selected according to the needs of the school—not because of the intense desire of some agent to sell them. It is poor policy for any library to be selected entirely from the books published by a single firm. Generally speaking, nothing is saved in dealing with publishers, so far as money goes, and the power to make an all round selection is almost invariably lost. An agent who comes to a district with a case of 30 books which he sells for $30, or more, is a person to be avoided. The average cost for books for popular reading is about $1 a volume. An all round school library need average not more than 80 cents a volume, exclusive of reference books. For the first four grades, the average will probably not exceed 55 cents a volume.

Some school people seem to think because some very good little books can be had for 25 cents apiece, that 50 cents is a princely sum to pay for books for a school library. A cheap book is, of necessity, a small affair and must be gotten up in a style that will permit of a low price. In spite of the fact that more good books than ever before can be had for little money, it is still true that the great proportion of the best books, whether for children or adults, are published at $1 and upwards. Illustrations have become so much of a necessity in nice books that the cost of the nicest books for children is increasing, rather than otherwise. The children of Nebraska are entitled to the best, both as to contents and general make-up. It pays to have a few well illustrated, beautifully made books for the children of each grade. More and more, language is being supplemented by art, and American people are getting much of their education from pictures. Give the children of Nebraska a chance to see and read the best from every standpoint.

In rural communities, it often happens that the money devoted to school libraries is raised outside of school revenues, and in such cases, it is desirable to select some of the books for the older people in the district. The district school should be made to count for something to all the people who live within the sphere of its influence. The school library can help to strengthen the intellectual life of the community. The selections made for the upper grades in this list, have been made with a view to making the school library part of the life of the district.

In order that districts may secure the best possible discounts, after comparing figures from several reliable jobbers, we have decided to recommend the St. Paul Book & Stationery Co., St. Paul, Minn.

The prices given are the list, or publishers' price, and the net price to districts, which is the price for which the St. Paul book & stationery co. will send books, freight prepaid to the nearest depot, for orders of $25 or upwards, if order is accompanied by money order or draft for the amount. Less than $25 worth of books will be sent prepaid upon receipt of an additional 5 per cent. of the amount of the order, except for orders of less than $10, which will be sent at purchaser's expense.

SUGGESTED FORM FOR ORDER.

................................(Director)
District. no......, ...County, Neb.

Post office address............. Nearest express office...............

Such orders will be filled promptly. If the items of your order are not all in stock, it will usually take two weeks for the jobber to get the books from the publishers. Do not leave the selection of any of your books to your book seller. If you order something that is out of stock or out of print, wait until it can be gotten, or send with your order, a list from which the book seller may substitute. You will find the prices offered, as low as any you could get in any way, and we have confidence that the book seller will deal fairly with you. Report any cause for dissatisfaction to this office.

The Secretary of the Commission will be glad to receive criticisms on this list, and suggestions from teachers. Any additional information concerning these or other books will be cheerfully furnished at this office.
