ALD American Library Directory™

When you need to find anyone or anything in the library community, this is the place to turn to. Includes details for more than 36,000 public, academic, special, and government libraries and library-related organizations in the U.S. and Canada. Addresses, phone and fax numbers, email addresses, network participation, expenditures, holdings, special collections, key personnel, special services, and more are provided. ALD lets you:

- Locate libraries, consortia, library schools, colleagues, resources, and qualified prospects with ease.
- Search by library type or location to identify libraries and special collections.
- Identify all libraries that meet certain criteria—holdings, staff size, expenditures, income, and more—with a single search
- Combine search categories to meet the most complex and exhaustive library research needs.
- Compare other libraries' facilities, services, and expenditures with yours.
- Find consortium libraries or networks for interlibrary loans, information, or membership.

FSO Fulltext Sources Online

FSO is an extensive listing of periodicals accessible online in full text through a host of aggregators and content providers such as BurrellesLuce, Dialog, Eureka, Factiva, GENIOS, LexisNexis, Ovid, ProQuest, Wilson Web, and many more. Lists more than 40,000 newspapers, journals, magazines, newsletters, newswires, and transcripts. Each title entry consists of the aggregators and databases that provide the publication online in full text. Coverage dates, frequencies, and lag times of titles appearing online, as well as ISSN's and document types, are included.

Publication listings can be searched by keyword, ISSN, e-ISSN, or exact title match. Searching can be limited by subject, language, geographic location, aggregator, or availability on the internet. Listings can also be browsed by the same limitations. Direct links take the user to the archives or publisher's homepage. Our own FSOLinks shorten long URLs for easy manageability. Updated weekly with new URLs continually being added.

FAITS Faulkner Advisory for Information Technology Studies™

A computer and communications reference library created especially for use by the academic community, FAITS contains hundreds of well-organized and practical reports (technology tutorials, marketplace overviews, implementation guides, product and company profiles, comparison and selection guides, and standards reports) covering areas such as IT infrastructure, telecommunications, wireless technology, data networking, convergence, security, enterprise systems, the internet, business processes, and healthcare and government IT.

Continually updated and replenished, FAITS reports help students, instructors, and administrators learn about and keep up with the critical issues, emerging trends, products, services, and vendors at the forefront. Plainly written, uniformly formatted, and easy to understand. Provides convenient links to several online technology and business news resources, as well as direct links to a wealth of bibliographic resources covering computer science, mathematics, and more are included. Browse by subject area, report type, or quickly search the entire library by keyword.

Used by leading academic institutions worldwide including Duke, Baylor, Stanford, University of Pennsylvania, Boston College, Drexel, Vanderbilt, University of Toronto, University of North Carolina, William & Mary, and Dartmouth.

SMP Faulkner Security Management Practices

Insightful, real-world reports for meeting today's complex security and business continuity challenges. SMP reports discuss and dissect the critical topics and issues that matter most — What do I need to know about e-waste disposal? What can I do to protect employees against a terrorist attack? How can I implement an intrusion prevention system? What can I do about workplace violence? How do I perform a physical security gap analysis? How do I select an alternate recovery facility? How do I calculate return on security investment? What do I need to know about biometrics and privacy? How do I handle crisis management? The list of security-related topics we cover is expansive and comprehensive.

Authors and contributors are industry practitioners. Many have served in key corporate, academic, or government security advisory positions. Some are active in the security lecture and seminar circuits or teach at the university or graduate level. A number have been published in the leading industry and business journals and are authors of popular security-related books.

Includes access to all archived reports covering facility security, IT and network security, financial and legal security, business continuity, risk, crisis management, personnel security, and more. A weekly electronic news digest summarizing all of the major security news, events, and happenings rounds out this extraordinary resource.
